★ MURDER AT THE DEADWOOD CANTINA ★

Anna Belle

Gambling Jack's wealthy backer and longtime friend — his 'good luck charm' from the South.

How to Play It

A proud Southern lady who's above all these Westerners. Insist loudly that Jack was cheated, and keep a sharp eye on every card player in the room.

Starter Lines

1. There's no way Jack lost fair and square. Somebody at that table cheated him, and I aim to find out who!
2. Holly Hickok, you sweet-talkin' sidewinder — I saw you cozyin' up to Jack this week!
3. Harry, how exactly do you know Jack so well? You two seem awful chummy.

Be Ready If Asked

“How do you feel about Jack's loss?” → "Robbed! Jack was cheated, plain as day."

“Who do you think cheated?” → "Holly Hickok, that sidewinder! I'll prove it before the night is through."

“You've got the wrong card player, honey.” → "Then who is it? Tell me this instant!"

When to use these: After Harry's welcome, go find the person each line mentions (or anyone nearby) and work all three into conversation before the lights go out. Tell the host quietly when you're done. After the murder, follow your B envelope.

OBJECTIVES

Anna Belle

Starting Objectives:

- Call Holly Hickok (a card player) a show-off every chance you get. You caught Holly sweet-talking with Gambling Jack (your friend) earlier this week.
- Stand by Gambling Jack's side and insist that he was cheated out of a win at the tournament.
- Ask Harry High-Stakes (the cantina owner) how he knows Gambling Jack so well.
- Find out the background of all of the other poker must have cheated Jack out of winning.
- Openly accuse other card players, including Mitch cheating. Assure the other card players that they will be sorry they cheated by the end of the night.
- Question Minnie Money (a debutante) on how she feels about Holly Hickok. Conspire together against Holly.
- Find out from Barb Cassidy on how she feels about Poker Alice. Conspire together against Alice.
- away from Jack or she will be sorry!

Night of Mystery

Anna Belle

A true southern belle, you treasure your longtime friend, Gambling Jack. Many years ago, you caught up with Jack while he was playing cards for high stakes down on the riverboats in Charleston. At the time when you met Jack, he had a losing record at the poker tables. Despite his unsuccessful career, you believed in Jack and he relied on your money. At the beginning of the relationship, it was you (with your family money) that funded Jack's desire to be a professional poker player. Since then, Jack has turned his career around to become one of the best poker players around. As a woman who likes attention, you very much enjoy being the backer of a poker phenomenon.

Among your duties as a faithful backer and friend, you have traveled here to Deadwood to support Jack while he played in the Deadwood Poker Tournament. Since Jack is on a five-year winning streak, you greatly enjoy coming to the tournaments to watch him win. Jack has always referred to you as his 'good luck charm' and that is exactly what you intended to be. However, after witnessing Jack's loss in the tournament earlier today, you are enraged and convinced that someone must have cheated. How else could Jack lose? After observing the other card players in the tournament, you are sure that Holly Hickok was the one who MUST have cheated and caused Jack to lose. Earlier this week, you caught Holly sweet-talking Jack and a woman with such a lack of morals is sure to be a cheater, too. While at the tournament, you have also seen Poker Alice (the poker dealer) watching Jack very closely. Not wanting to trust any of the women, you watched Alice more closely only to observe that Billie-the-Bartender has a fond loyalty to Poker Alice, one you think that Alice may be taking advantage of.

While Jack is more concerned about saving face at the tournament party tonight and bonding with Harry High-Stakes (an old-time buddy), you are focused on getting revenge on whoever put Jack's good name to shame by causing him to lose. Although you are happy to attend the Deadwood Cantina Poker Tournament Party to be sociable with the other party guests, you also look at the party as an opportunity to defend Jack and his good name!

Acting and Dressing Your Part: As a dignified woman, originally from the South, you consider yourself above all of the people from the West. Drawing from your roots, you will want to wear a Victorian style dress, along with a hoop skirt and carry a parasol. At the party, you will hold yourself with an air of superiority and insist that someone has cheated Jack out of winning the tournament. For more ideas on how to dress and a glossary of wild western words and phrases to use at the party, please see please see the party tips section at www.nightofmystery.com.
